Alumni Lunch To be Held At Towers Hotel

Justice Cuff Named Chairman, President Emil K. Ellis Announces PLANS ARE FORMULATED In Keeping With War Times, Programme Will Reflect Unity of Purpose for Success

Tickets for the luncheon will be $1.85 each. Send in your reservations now for yourself and guests. Alumni Luncheon Committee, Brooklyn Law School, 375 Pearl St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

The 40th annual alumni meeting of the Brooklyn Law School will be celebrated at an informal luncheon at the Towers Hotel, Clark Street, Brooklyn, at 1 o'clock on the afternoon of Saturday, May 9, 1942.

President Emil K. Ellis of the Alumni Association has announced acceptance by Justice Thomas J. Cuff of the chairmanship of the Committee in charge of the function. The committee is actively engaged in making preparations for the event.

"These are serious days, as we all well realize," Justice Cuff stated today. "We are engaged in a war that is testing the strength of our democratic institutions. To the effort involved in success we must all devote our most strenuous effort and our most unselfish devotion."

"Part of the success of our arms is dependent upon the vigor and strength of our civilian morale. To that purpose the President of the United States suggests that normal activities be not discontinued. They must, however, be modified to meet the pressing needs of all out preparation for an all out victory. In conformity with that objective, the Brooklyn Law School alumni function this year will be simple. We will meet and break bread together that where we may find strength for the work of the year ahead."

"We hope to have as a guest of honor one who will bring to us a vital message from the active front. We will hear a word of greeting from Dean Richardson. We will find enthusiasm in the appropriate entertainment that is being arranged. The price of the luncheon is kept low so that whatever is saved over the normal cost of an alumni dinner might be dedicated to the war fund by the individual alumnus."

"I earnestly extend an invitation to attend, to all alumni who read this message. We should have one of the most inspiring meetings our Law School Association has ever held."

Articles in Law Review

The Brooklyn Law Review for April, 1942, contains three leading articles: "From Seditious Libel to Freedom of the Press," by Justice Bernard L. Shientag, of the Supreme Court of the State of New York; "The President over the Judiciary," (Part II) by Prof. C. Perry Patterson of the University of Texas; and "Some Aspects of the Law of Entrapment," by Mr. Harry G. Anderson, of the New York Bar.

War Films To Be Shown

Through the courtesy of Irving Greenspan, '27, arrangements have been made for the showing of a series of war films in the auditorium of Brooklyn Law School, 375 Pearl Street, on Thursday, April 23, at 9 P. M. The films include the following: "The Warning," showing the bombing of Nottingham, England, and activities of the air raid wardens; "Fighting the Fire Bomb"; "The Road to Victory," a newly-released picture from Australia, and "American Sea Power," a Fox Movietone News reel, with Lowell Thomas as narrator. Friends of the law school are invited to attend. There will be no admission charge.

OTHER APPOINTMENTS

Justice Burlingame is Reappointed; Surplus and Pisciotta Made Magistrates

Two graduates of Brooklyn Law School have recently been elevated to the Supreme Court bench of New York State, by nomination of Governor Lehman, confirmed by the Senate. They are Bernard Botwin, '24 and E. Ivan Rubenstein, '17.

Justice Alvah W. Burlingame, '04, was reappointed to another ten-year term on the Court of Special Sessions bench. Abner C. Surplus, '08, former member of the faculty, has been made a City Magistrate by Mayor La Guardia, and Alex Pisciotta, '22, formerly director of the Department of Markets, Bureau of Weights and Measures, was also designated a magistrate. Six days after he assumed his post, however, he was called to active duty as a Captain in the Cavalry Reserve of the United States Army.

Justice Rubenstein, after graduation from Brooklyn Law School served his clerkship in the office of Algeron I. Nova, now Supreme Court Justice, and in 1925 he entered into a law partnership with Mr. Nova, and George Rosling. He has been active in legal circles for many years.

Justice Botwin was inducted on Monday afternoon, Dec. 31. Many notable members of the bench and bar attended the ceremonies, over which Justice Ferdinand Pecora presided. Among those who extended their congratulations were Lieutenant Governor Charles Toletti, Israel

Ben Schreiber, in behalf of Omega Chi Law Fraternity, Alfred A. Cook, of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York, former District Attorney Joab H. Banton, the Hon. Louis H. Pink, State Superintendent of Insurance and Dean William Payson Richardson of Brooklyn Law School.

Other speakers included Bernard Treubner, Albert E. Schwartz and Major General Oltman.

Justice Botwin was designated to serve out the unexpired term of former Justice Lloyd Church. He will serve until December 31 of this year. An election will be held in November for the full fourteen-year term.

Mental Discipline From the Law

Edward Johnson, of Guelph, Ontario, choir boy, matinee idol, for many years ranking tenor of the Metropolitan Opera, of which for five years he has been general manager, has this to say about the law:

"I am glad that I studied for the law. This study gave me a mental discipline and precision of thought that has enabled me to meet the responsibilities my position has placed upon me."

Practice Court Trials, Apr. 25

Students Prepare for 1942 Term of Undergraduate Proceedings at Law

The 1942 Term of the Practice Court of the Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University will be inaugurated on Saturday, April 25th. This will be the 21st session of the noted undergraduate practice tribunal, instituted in 1921 by the late Dr. Edwin Welling Cady. Jurists from the several local courts and prominent members of the bar will preside at the hearings. In every way, the cases are tried as nearly as possible in conformity with actual trial procedure.

Jurists and attorneys who presided over the closing sessions of the 1941 Term of the Practice Court included Judge Grover M. Moscovitz, of the Federal District Court; Justice Thomas J. Cuff, '11, of the Supreme Court; the Hon. Mitchell May, former Justice of the Supreme Court; Justice Nicholas M. Pette, '12, of the Municipal Court; Jay Leo Rothschild; Douglass C. Lawrence, '12, Benjamin C. Ribman, '08, and Sidney Morris, '22.

Phi Delta Phi Election

Officers have been elected for the ensuing year by the members of Epsilon Inn, Phi Delta Phi. They are as follows: Magister: Frank R. Nuendorf. Exchequer: James Winans. Clerk: Henry Weisman. Historian: Joseph Walsh.

Justice Shientag's Book

Justice Bernard L. Shientag, LL.D., '41, has revised his lectures and law review articles on the subject of summary judgment and has recently published the revision as a volume of 150 pages in which he gives a comprehensive treatment of the summary judgment rule.

Law Club Organized

The Richmond Law Club of the Brooklyn Law School, composed of students and graduates who reside on Staten Island, was recently organized by Herbert Scheinberg, '32. The club, which numbers 9 undergraduates and 11 alumni, is headed by Surrogate John C. Boylan, LL.B., '21, LL.M., '37, for the alumni, and Emil Rapp, '42, for the undergraduates.

Isquith, '33, Wins Navy Cross for Pearl Harbor Heroism

For heroism during the course of the bombing attack on Pearl Harbor, Lieutenant Commander Solomon Isquith, '33, has been awarded the Navy Cross, according to an announcement made by the Navy Department. The award was made by Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, at ceremonies held in Honolulu on April 7. Lt. Commander Isquith was in command of the U.S.S. Utah when she was assailed by Japanese bombers.

The vessel was hit, and started to roll over under the impact of the bombs. Commander Isquith kept his crew under perfect discipline. The Navy Cross award was made for the commander's "cool and efficient manner of directing abandonment under the bombing attack," as a consequence of which ninety per cent. of the crew were saved.

DEAN DESCRIBES DETAILS

Curriculum Retains Full Professional Education—Time Shortened With Court of Appeals Approval

An accelerated curriculum, which makes possible the completion of a full law school course in shortened time, has been announced as immediately effective at Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University by Dean William Payson Richardson.

"The primary objective of this curriculum," Dean Richardson said, "is to give students an opportunity to complete all or a substantial part of their law studies before their induction into military service. For those not subject to call it offers the option of more rapidly completing their professional education at a time when there is a greater demand than ever for persons trained in the law."

"Specifically, the accelerated curriculum provides the opportunity of completing a three year full-time course in two years; or a four-year so-called 'part-time' course in three years."

"This objective is accomplished without the elimination of a single subject or the curtailment of a single class-room hour of instruction. Instead, the same courses will be introduced as heretofore, but in a shorter period of elapsed time; that is, by putting more hours into a year than under the extended schedule."

"It is possible for students to enter Brooklyn Law School, and take the full schedule on the intensified basis in June, in September or in February. Full time students may finish in two instead of three years by attending two summer sessions and two regular school years. Part time students may finish in three years instead of four by attending two summers and three regular school years."

"Whether or not to take the intensified course will be optional with each student. It will be possible to take the normal course as heretofore by attending the usual fall and spring semesters and taking no summer work."

"The intensified as well as the normal curriculum complies with the Court of Appeals standards for the operation of approved law schools. The Court entered orders on January 22, modifying its former rules for periods of instruction during the continuance of the state of war between the United States and Germany, Italy and Japan, and for a period of two years from June 15 following the termination of war. This provision assures those who enter at any time a full opportunity for completing an accelerated course, though hostilities come to an end before the student has completed his prescribed work."

"Details of the summer course of instruction may be had by application at the office of the registrar by mail, or more preferably in person, so that all questions may be answered to the satisfaction of applicants."

LESSONS OF THE WAR

War has brought to America a bewildering assortment of unforeseen problems. Their correct solution is of critical importance. Upon this issue the continued safety and integrity of our democracy depend.

One thing is clear: No one can continue to live as he lived before bombs fell out of the sky onto Pearl Harbor. What happened there made it immediately necessary for every American to re-evaluate his life in terms of fending off a great peril. Yes, hardship and danger must be faced not only by the young men who are taken into the armed services. More and more does it become manifest that everyone's place in these days is on the front line of national effort. We are fighting nations totally organized for our conquest. Anything short of total effort to oppose such enemies is an invitation to disaster on a catastrophic scale.

Everyone cannot be in the armed forces. Not everyone can be engaged in production of war materials, in shops, and mines, at forges and at dynamites. The life of our great nation continues along inevitable lines. Those who fight and those who produce materials for the fighters must be fed and clothed and housed. Children are born. They need to be cared for and reared. Courts must continue to sit. Legislatures must keep up their functions. Young people must be educated for the business of living in this grim world.

In every aspect, carrying on of the essential purposes of our civilization must now be keyed to the waging of a total war by a totally co-ordinated people. With the men in the army and navy we need have no concern. How splendidly they are serving needs no retelling here. With readjustments that are taking place in civilian life, however, certain developments are worthy of attention. Of these, none is more significant to students of the law than the recent move on the part of educational authorities to curtail courses in schools and colleges.

Making it possible for men to enter their life careers at a reasonably early age has been a reform long overdue. The time spent in compulsory preliminary education had been unduly extended. To such lengths had it been spun, indeed, that often it seemed as if attendance at school and college were the primary purpose of life instead of merely a preparation for life. As the Rev. Robert I. Gannon, president of Fordham University, well expressed it: "We have been forcing our youths to give half of their lives to formal schooling on the assumption that they will never learn anything after they graduate, instead of concentrating on the instruments with which they can make their whole lives an education."

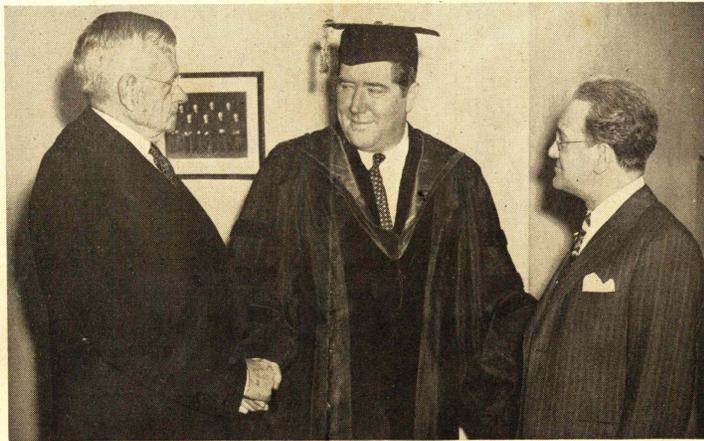

This same principle has many times been asserted by Dean Richardson. He has long urged reduction of the time devoted by compulsion to general education so that the essentials of professional law training might be given to students at an earlier age.

"Lawyers are being admitted to the bar later in life than is desirable," Dean Richardson said. "Men who spend too many years in studying lose the keen edge of that dynamic fervor which makes great lawyers and great judges. We demand young men for war. We also need young men, alive, keen and vigorous and unafraid, at the bar. Denial of the right to become lawyers at a comparatively early age is a loss not only to the individuals, but to the profession and to the nation."

Now the needs of war have brought clearly into focus the need of streamlining education, even as war-making has had to be streamlined. And even as the war-makers have had to revise their ideas about modern conflict, so our educational authorities have had to revise their ideas about modern education. Just as the war machine is being cleared of the musty, ineffective traditions of by-gone days, so the educational machine is being cleared of its incrustation of barnacles.

In brief, what is happening is that youth is being made available for service at an earlier date, instead of being kept too long at books behind college walls. If this reform survives the war, at least one highly desirable result will have been achieved.

brings to us information as to the developments of the titanic struggle. The newspapers daily are devoting pages to accounts of the terrific battle for supremacy. We believe that the Allies will win. Their cause is just. The hope of mankind rests in their success. We wait eagerly for information that will keep us apprised of what is going on, but most information reaches us only after it has been censored.

A Direct Report

"Tonight we are to hear from one who has been personally in contact with events in this epic struggle. What he says to us will pass through the hands of no censor. He will bring to us a picture of what he has seen and heard as he passed through the countries that are at war.

"We are very proud of his career. Although he is an alumnus of Brooklyn Law School, we assume no credit for the great honor that he has brought to us and to himself. Tonight he is honoring us, and we are in turn honoring him."

The Dean requested the guest of honor to rise. The doctor's hood was placed upon the candidate by Prof. David A. Richardson, and the honorary degree of LL.D. was awarded by the Dean with the following citation:

QUENTIN JAMES REYNOLDS: Eminent student and analyst of foreign affairs; instructor in contemporary history to a generation of Americans bewildered by the catastrophic crisis of war; adventurer in quest of truth into far places under conditions of imminent peril; staunch exponent of the ideals of democracy; author, lecturer, reporter; world renowned recorder of social and economic events; loyal alumnus of the Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University.

Dr. Reynolds, in responding, said, in part:

"My deepest respect goes to Brooklyn Law School for the work it has been doing to keep its students alert and informed on law, the great force that holds civilization together. My profound thanks go to the University, to the Law School and to Dean Richardson for this honor which has been conferred upon me. It is with a feeling of gratitude that I find myself here in a place where law means something, and where law books are guides to human associations.

War to Defend Law

"Over in Europe they are fighting against laws and law books. The same fight is pointing our way. War is the only means which we have of defending ourselves. We must use against our enemies the weapons they use against us.

"Law books are of small use to foreign correspondents. The guide book that they follow is called Allice in Wonderland. Like the White Rabbit of that quaint directory we travel so fast that we never see anything at all. You here in America are in a better position to pass appraisal on the general trend of events than are we who see only a small section of them at a time.

"My foreign experiences, however, have brought me into intimate contact with some interesting personages. I got, for instance, to know Winston Churchill quite well — not Winston Churchill the public man, but Winston Churchill, the companion who sits around after dinner and talks as a friend to friends. I was with him one evening, when Harry Hopkins was Churchill's only other guest. For four or five hours our host talked. He talked about the days after Dunkirk. 'This is serious,' I said to Max Beaverbrook, 'only Spitfires can save us.' We got the Spitfires. Then Beaverbrook said: 'If only God will give us three months!' We got the Spitfires and we got the three months. We won the Battle of Britain.

"Again, Churchill said: 'We must annihilate that wicked man. If Germany wins, he'll have me shot. If that happens, I shall surely not like it, but it would not offend my sense of the proprieties.'"

Visit to Russia

Dr. Reynolds told of his visit to Stalin in Russia. "I was invited to the Kremlin. We went to a palatial ante-room. All the great leaders of the Soviet Republics were there. The traitorous leaders had been weeded out in 1936. More than 100,000 Russians died, but today it is possible to say that there is no Fifth Column to fight Russia from the flanks and from the rear. That is why it is able to withstand the onslaught of German might that has crumpled other nations like tissue paper.

"Molotov was at that meeting and other notables, Litvinoff and Oumansky and Voroshiloff. And as we stood there chatting, Stalin came in—a genial, pleasant gentleman, quite unlike his pictures. Oumansky acted as interpreter. 'Comrade Stalin says he would like to propose a toast to President Roosevelt. The President has had the hardest job on earth, to give active help to Britain and Russia while he was head of a great neutral nation. May God bless President Roosevelt!'"

Dr. Reynolds told of leaving Russia by airplane and of a forced landing near Jerusalem, "a place," he said, "I had always wanted to visit, but I had merely a brief overnight stay, before we were again on our way to Egypt, from where we later proceeded to America."

Justice Ferdinand Pecora brought the exercises to a close by praising Dr. Reynolds for the work he had done, and the constructive message he had given.

Phi Delta Phi Fraternity Holds Initiation Dinner

Members of the faculty joined with the undergraduates of Phi Delta Phi in their annual dinner, following initiatory ceremonies in Richardson Hall, Brooklyn Law School, on the evening of February 28, 1942. Edward V. Alfieri, Magister of Everts Inn, presided at the dinner held at the Towers Hotel. Prof. James Lawrence Murphy acted as toastmaster. Informal talks were given by Profs. Flouton, Sugarman and Weyrauch, and several members of the undergraduate body.

Members of Senior Class, March, 1942, Brooklyn Law School

Members of the Senior Class, as of March, 1942, of the Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University are shown in the three group pictures on this page. Upper right is the Morning Division; center is the Afternoon Division and lower right the Evening Division.

A large percentage of the senior class availed themselves of the opportunity. Subsequent to the Bar examinations, many were inducted into military service. As a result, the full class will not be present at the June Commencement exercises. These photographs were taken while the three groups were still substantially intact, although a number had already been enrolled in the army or navy.

Due to the war emergency, permission was granted by the Court of Appeals to seniors who normally would not be eligible until June, to take the Bar examinations in March.

Philonomic Council Awards Honor Keys

The Justinian, Vol. 1942-1943, Iss. A-1

Class of 1911 Holds Thirtieth Anniversary Reunion

At the annual dinner of the Philonomic Council, honor society of the Brooklyn Law School held on January 29 at the Hotel St. George, four distinguished graduates of the school were inducted as honorary members. They were Justice Frank P. Adel, '03, of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court; Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., '26, of New York State; Justice Thomas J. Cuff, '11, of the Supreme Court and Dr. Jacob Aronson, '06, vice-president and counsel to the New York Central Railroad. Honor graduates of the September, 1941, class were inducted into membership at the same time. They were Peter C. Demetri, Robert Rosenthal, Reed John Murphy and Hyman L. Saminsky.

Meyer Bernstein, '25, Under-Sheriff of New York City, was introduced by Chancellor Robert R. Sugarman, '26, who acted as toastmaster. Mr. Bernstein, first Chancellor of the Council, reported on finances of the organization. Brief addresses were made by Harold M. Kennedy, '24, United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York, by former Vice-Dean William V. Hagendorn, '16, Prof. Edward A. Vosseler, past Commander for New York of the American Legion, and by Surrogate Francis D. McGarey. Others who spoke were Justice William B. Carswell, '08, of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Honorary Chancellor of the Philonomic Council, and John J. McCloskey, '37, recently designated Sheriff of New York City. Dean William Payson Richardson was then introduced. Dean Richardson said, in part:

"It is inspiring to meet here with so many eminent graduates of the Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University. What you have won in the way of honors and distinction sets you apart as persons dedicated in mind and spirit to the great profession of which we are all members. Many of you are entitled to unusual recognition because you have won your way forward in spite of difficulties and hardships that would have deterred those of lesser faith and courage.

"American colleges, universities and professional schools are today face to face with emergency conditions. Courses are being curtailed. Some institutions have announced the awarding of baccalaureate degrees of B.A. and B.S. after only two years of study. The Court of Appeals has made it possible to reduce the elapsed period of study for a law degree from four years to three years for evening students and from three years to two years for day students. But there is no let-down in scholarship. The same number of lecture periods is required. Time is made up by using part of the summer vacation period for class work. Increased diligence of application and concentration will be called for.

"Our profession cannot be permitted to suffer, no matter what emergencies may arise. It is in lawyers in the days to follow this war that the people will look for guidance to a just peace and a lasting peace. Peace can be based only on the bedrock of law. We promise to hold to the high ideals of our profession. Education, scholarship, love for the law. These are characteristics that you possess. They are characteristics that are essential for the welfare of our nation."

Hon. Judge Webster J. Oliver, '11, of the United States Customs Court also addressed the gathering.

Thirty-three Members Gather "Twenty-two Days After Pearl Harbor"

JUSTICE CUFF PRESIDES

Scholarship Fund Grows; Five Annual Awards Have Been Made to Undergraduates

The Class of 1911, Brooklyn Law School of St. Lawrence University held its thirtieth anniversary dinner at the Cafe Loyale, Fifth Avenue, Manhattan, on Monday evening, December 29. Thirty-three of the eighty-eight surviving members of the class attended. Several were unavoidably detained because of the emergency prevailing twenty-two days after Pearl Harbor, or because of sickness.

The Hon. Thomas J. Cuff, Justice of the Supreme Court, president of the class, called the meeting to order. Secretary William Feinberg read several communications from absentee members and on motion forwarded to Dean William Payson Richardson the following message: "The Class of 1911 sends to you its heartfelt greetings and abiding affection. Thirty years after our graduation from Brooklyn Law School we still find inspiration in the love for the law that you imparted to us. Our hope is that you may be spared for many years to continue the work that has been the guiding light to so many members of the legal profession."

Justice Wenzel Speaks

The Hon. Henry G. Wenzel, Jr., vice president, delivered a brief message of greeting to his fellow classmates. "We are living," he said, "in the most remarkable days of recorded history. The ways ahead in the days ahead are not at all clear. Our nation has been attacked. We are preparing for full participation in a war whose consequences will mark the course of history for centuries in the future. What that will mean to our individual lives no one can foretell. "We are fortunate indeed to be able after thirty years, and in the midst of this great crisis to assemble thirty-three members of our class. This is a tribute to the law school from which we graduated, and especially to the great leader, Dean Richardson, to whom we have just sent a message of respect and admiration. May we meet again, all of us, five years from now in a world free from anxiety."

Justice Cuff Points Out Changes

Justice Cuff spoke of the great changes that had taken place in the world since graduation in 1911. He read to his classmates headlines taken from newspapers printed on commencement day thirteen years ago. Four airplane hops at a height of fifty feet were described as remarkable, "as indeed they were for those days." He spoke of the changes in the life of the unit with which the class of 1911 had served throughout the years with their many changes, and specifically noted what had been done to assist the Executive Committee for the past five years were ratified. The Executive committee consists of Hon.

Thomas J. Cuff, President, Hon. Henry G. Wenzel, Jr., first vice-president, Hon. Isaac Pacht, 2d vice-president, Hon. Raphael Murphy, 3d vice-president, William Feinberg, secretary, Joseph H. Davis, treasurer, and the following directors: Prof. John A. Eubank, Edwin A. LaCrosse, Harry H. Schutte and Prof. Martin H. Weyrauch.
