

The Justinian

Volume 1984
Issue 3 April

Article 1

2018

The Justinian

Follow this and additional works at: <https://brooklynworks.brooklaw.edu/justinian>

Recommended Citation

(2018) "The Justinian," The Justinian: Vol. 1984 : Iss. 3 , Article 1.
Available at: <https://brooklynworks.brooklaw.edu/justinian/vol1984/iss3/1>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Special Collections at BrooklynWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Justinian by an authorized editor of BrooklynWorks.

The Justinian

"Chasing an ambulance a day keeps the creditors away."

—Spiro Agnew at disbarment proceedings

Vol. XLIII

Sunday, April 1, 1984

No. 7/2

STATE NIXES BLS LOANS

By Oriana Focolaci

The New York State Higher Education Corporation (NYSHEC) will not grant Guaranteed Student Loans (GSL) to BLS students for the 1984-85 school year. BLS was notified of this on April 1, 1984 by a telegram from Governor Mario Coma. Gov. Coma also notified Dean David Trigger that the NYSHEC would immediately call due BLS student loans that are currently outstanding.

The reason for this, according to Trigger, is that the Governor feels that since employment prospects for BLS graduates are bleak, students will not be able to repay the loans anyway. Further, said Trigger, "The Governor is calling the loans due now while the State still knows where to nab the students. Blame it on LaDoom," he added, referring to BLS Placement Director, Paulette LaDoom. In response to this allegation, LaDoom said, "Why's everybody always picking on me?"

"There is one bright spot to all this," Trigger pointed out, "The Governor enjoyed the town meeting held at BLS so much that he'll be back for another." Trigger also said that the Governor is considering whether to build a new domed baseball stadium where the school now stands. "If he does that, I get to be Commissioner of Baseball," Trigger said with a smile.

STUDENTS LOSE DUTIES

By Katie Tongue

BLS Professor Muddy Waters has informed the Justinian that the legal writing staff will be assuming the student body's former duty of attending classes. Effective immediately, students will be barred from the classrooms. Student representative Malum Prohibitum stated that he agreed to the proposal because of the lack of student input into teaching the classes. "Students never write the syllabi for law school courses so we're really not losing anything by not attending," said Prohibitum.

Waters revealed that she has decided to hire three students to assist her staff in attending all the classes. These students have been selected from the current BLS student body. According to reliable sources, the BLS student body was used because it is a "convenient pool" to draw from, but it is uncertain whether this will be done in the future.

"I think this change will be beneficial to all concerned," said Waters. One immediate advantage she noted is that lectures will not be interrupted by student's questions. "When the people attending classes already know the subject, you'd be surprised how much more efficiently things run," said Waters.

Waters believes that students will benefit too, since their time will be freed for more creative pursuits. She stated that students could use the time to write Bore Review articles. When asked about students who are not members of Bore Review, Waters replied, "What difference does it make,

Trigger said BLS will not provide additional financial aid for students because "that would waste my hard earned money." Although Trigger admitted that the school is "favored with a huge endowment fund," he said the additional aid would cut into the Merit Scholarship program and alumni cocktail parties. "I understand that it will be difficult for students to come up with the money on such short notice," Trigger said with a tear in his eye, "but considering that tuition has exceeded the $5,000 loan limit for the past few years, I think most students have a few extra bucks stashed away somewhere."

BLS may implement a work-study program, according to Trigger, in order to assist students in this dilemma. "If we buy the Republic National Bank, we'll have to build a walkway between the school and the bank. This would be an ideal setting for a work study program since it's located so close to the school," he said. Alternatively, if the Governor goes through with the stadium, Trigger said that construction jobs will be offered to BLS graduates. "We will make every effort to convince the Governor to give our students first dibs on these jobs," he said. "This move should also increase the median salary of our grads, as reflected in those damn surveys LaDoom insists on publishing."

they're not going to get jobs anyway."

Waters deflected the criticism that has arisen because of her decision not to solicit student input. "I didn't think there was any need to call a formal meeting of the student body since this was a purely executive policy." Waters stated that she did take a random sampling of faculty members and that she did not hear any serious objections to her plan.

The Justinian has learned that the lone dissenter among the faculty members polled was Professor Sick Barrell. Barrell was concerned about the lack of a large audience to perform before. He expressed the fear that he would have to cancel his lucrative Cats-kill contract if he could not use BLS as a warm-up. When asked to comment on Water's proposal, Barrell would only say, "Shande on de Goyem." Plans are under way to install a laugh track in the room where Barrell will teach.

When asked about the effect the change will have on tuition, BLS Dean Trigger expressed the hope that an increase of 25% would be sufficient. The Dean cautioned, however, that a subsidy would have to be paid to the cafeteria and the book store to make up for their loss of business and that this could force a greater tuition rise.

Professor Waters noted that in the final analysis, sitting in a classroom and writing in a notebook are really nothing more than ministerial functions anyway. "Besides, Dean Trigger told me that I don't have to run to the students for every little thing."

KERMIT DEPOSES TRIGGER IN BLOODY COUP

By Hooz Lipshitz

On Friday, March 30, former Associate Dean Loose Kermit took over the ninth floor offices of Dean Trigger in an apparently effortless coup d'ecole. Encountering only light resistance from a weakly fortified lobby battalion composed of Mick, the day shift guard, and Ferd, a lower echelon custodial engineer, Kermit's troops easily battled their way up to the Moot Court Room to marshal forces for the final assault on the eighth and ninth floors.

Expecting fierce fighting at the eighth floor reception desk, Kermit had initially considered beginning his drive after 5 P.M. when the secretaries leave, but made his decision in favor of a 3 P.M. attack to gain the logistical advantage of the usual office disarray that accompanies the ten minute work period between lunch and the afternoon coffee break. However, Kermit hadn't counted on the early arrival from lunch of Receptionist Third Class Roost Wangerhopferschmidt.

"This setback was insignificant," Kermit said later from his command post in Trigger's office. "We suffered only one minor casualty when my aide, Martin Dilly, posed as a student who wanted to know if Prof. Lightly was in. Dilly's nose was sliced clean off when Wangerhopferschmidt slammed shut the glass partition shrieking, 'I have no-o-o-o-o idea!'" Kermit explained. The nose was rushed immediately to Columbia Presbyterian Hospital for tests.

Kermit expressed disappointment in Dilly's performance under pressure, especially in light of the eight months of intensive secret training in Newark's Ironbound district. "He ignored a cardinal rule that every first year BLS student learns in September: Keep your face away from the reception window," said Kermit.

Kermit's troops surround BLS

Fortuitously for Kermit, the incident caused enough of a diversion for his contingent to race up to the ninth floor, their final objective. However, valuable minutes were lost as the assault team stood at the elevator banks staring at the lighted "UP" button, before abandoning the plan and using the staircase.

Once on the ninth floor, Kermit's longtime friend and former secretary, Josephina Barnyard, had no trouble hopping the low barricade using Kermit as a step stool. "The rest was easy," chuckled Kermit. "The place was empty. My replacement, Robbin' Skinflix, was out negotia-
Continued on page 3

HOLSTER REVIEWS CON LAW GRADES

By Tom Snide

Professor Rank Holster announced today that he has decided to bow to overwhelming student pressure and revise the grades on his Constitutional Law exams for last semester. However, in order not to violate equal protection guarantees, Holster has decided to review and regrade all the past Constitutional Law exams in the BLS archives.

"Only in an altruist, collectivist society could I justify reviewing only one set of papers," Holster told the Justinian. "In a more rational society, it wouldn't matter whose ox gets gored." Holster noted that the regrading would proceed quickly as most of it would be done by machine. "I've programmed the school computer with the complete works of that well-known philosopher of the Objectionable School, I'm Damned," said Holster. "It should be able to grade those exams every bit as well as I could."

When faced with protests that past students did not expect their exams to be graded in light of this woman's theories Holster snapped, "Those Damned philosophies crop up in all my tests. I don't see any reason to change my standards just because some people might not be prepared."

The Justinian has learned that regrading is already well under way as are plans to accommodate those students who will have to retake the course. Dean Trigger has completed negotiations with George Steinbrenner to rent Yankee Stadium for the course. Trigger noted that the Yankees have agreed to bear half the cost of construction for the additional seats needed to accommodate the class.

"I don't think this will really inconvenience anybody," said the Dean. "I'm sure that Professors Barrell and Mean will be able to resume teaching just as soon as they retake and pass their Constitutional Law courses." Trigger noted that Professor Holster will have to bear the brunt of teaching the make-up course since fellow Con Law instructor Fancy Mink, is among the repeaters and because no one has signed up
Continued on page 3

Jestinian

BROOKLYN LAW SCHOOL
250 Joralemon Street, Brooklyn, NY 11201
Telephone: (212) 780-7986

Editorial Collective... Oriana Foolaci, Maude S. Linger, Hooz Lipschitz, Mike Malice, Tom Snide, Dam I. Rathernot, Katie Tongue

Ad Manager... Benny Boombotz

Photography... Flash Gordon

Contributors: Cinder Larvae, Burt Wiedermeyer

Jestinian is published not more than once a year somewhere on the Eastern seaboard. Its contents do not reflect the views or intelligence of the editorial collective or staff, who deny their amenability to service of process as there is considerable doubt whether they come under the definition of "persons" under any statute.

MUSICAL OFFICES

By Maude S. Linger

Dean Trigger announced today that the Moot Society Office would be the site for the new day care center that students and faculty have been pressing for. The plan was announced after a confidential meeting between Dean Trigger, Professor Muddy Waters and two representatives from the Moot Society. Trigger said, "The students and faculty have clearly articulated their desire for a day care center, and since the Moot Society is useless anyway, we figured we'd use their office space for a worthwhile program." A society spokesman agreed stating, "We've already abdicated all of our important duties, so we don't really need an office. We thought it would be the Society's way of contributing to the welfare of the school." Professor Muddy Waters explained that since the Writing Department had usurped all the Society's power, there was no longer any reason for the Society to exist.

The Writing Department, she explained, would run the second year and outside competitions as well as the first year competition. She said, "We're eager to take on these responsibilities, especially since the Moot Society has been doing well in recent outside competitions. If a student organization does well, we think the faculty justly deserves the credit."

In a related move, the faculty voted to relocate the Jestinian office to the lounge in the 9th floor ladies' room. Dean Trigger explained that the move would afford the office more space as well as provide a "more appropriate atmosphere for the (stuff) they publish."

The Jestinian staff responded angrily to the plan: "Although we're glad to have the additional space, we know the only reason they're moving us to the 9th floor is so they can keep an eye on us, and we're going to challenge the move in a lawsuit based on the prohibition against prior restraints as guaranteed by the first amendment."

It is reported that Professor Goal Jora had been approached by Jestinian staff members to represent them in their lawsuit, but declined stating, "Aside from the fact that my representation would constitute a conflict of interest since I voted for the move, I would question the merits of the case. Such a move would arguably be defended as a valid 'time, place, or manner' restriction, since the ladies' room is clearly a more appropriate forum for their views." Jora denied that he was preparing to represent the faculty and administration should the Jestinian follow through with its threat to name them as defendants. He stated that he preferred to remain neutral.

In other changes, the Student Bar and Grill Association's office has been moved to the 4th floor Men's Room, and Bore Review and International Journal of Bore will expand into the vacated former student offices.

https://brooklynworks.brooklaw.edu/justinian/vol1984/iss2/art1/office.

ARMED GUARDS TO PATROL THIRD FLOOR

By Dam I. Rathernot

Four student organizations have hired armed guards to patrol the third floor and protect student offices from unwanted faculty intrusions. Representatives from the organizations rejected Dean Trigger's protests that the students' move detracts from one of the law school's prime attractions which is the close student/faculty relationship.

Representatives from the student organizations, the Jestinian, Bore Review, the International Bore Journal, and the Moot Society, said there was no reason to believe that the guards would impair student/faculty relations and that there was a legitimate need for their presence. "There is a lot of expensive equipment back here," said L.N. Youngster of the Jestinian. "We all have typewriters to worry about and we at the Jestinian have to watch out for our desks."

"That's right," added Leyden N. Baconburger, the Head Cheese at the International Bore Journal. "Not only that, but I just got a nice big office with windows and everything. If I am not careful someone will try to move in and take it over."

Youngster and Baconburger also pointed out that many students often leave their coats, books and other personal belongings in their offices and that it is just too much trouble to expect people to lock their doors.

"The problem is we just have no control over our halls," said Mallum Prohibitum, President-for-Life of the Moot Society. "Faculty members, and people who appear to be faculty members, are roaming our floor at all hours. We have no way of knowing whether they have legitimate business or not," he said. "I want to make it clear that this is not retaliation, on our part, for the fortress on the eighth floor."

Baconburger said that the armed guards were chosen because it was easier and cheaper than building a wall. "And there's no truth to the rumours that the guards have been instructed to shoot on sight," she said. "We want to give the faculty at least a chance to explain themselves."

Bore Review's old lady, Irate Codger, who went along with the plan in order to preserve that organization's elite and segregated status, refused to comment for publication in the Jestinian.

In a letter to the student groups, Dean Trigger expressed concern that their action might heighten tensions in student/faculty relations and cause him to escalate security measures on the eighth floor and throughout the building. "We might move Ms. Cerberus from the eighth floor to the front door," he said. After all, there's no reason to believe students actually need to enter the building to get a legal education.

L.N. Youngster of the Jestinian poo-pooed the Dean's threats. "Poo-h-poo," he said.

Trigger's letter also expressed concern that the guards might interfere with the operations of the Placement and Alumni offices. Youngster dismissed the Dean's complaints with a wink and a nod. "They don't do anything anyway," he added.

"Trigger can always move those offices upstairs," Youngster said, "or they could swap offices with the Student Bar and Grill Association." SBGA President Rubber Mallet said she would welcome the opportunity to move the SBGA office out of the fourth floor men's room (see related story). Mallet also said she felt that paying the guards' salaries was a proper expenditure of student funds. "I just don't know why no one thought of it sooner," she said.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

COURT STREET ELITE—At its most recent meeting, the Court Street Elite voted to spend its entire budget on outfitting its members with new sneakers and police radio scanners to better monitor new trends in negligence law.

NATIONAL LAWYERS GRILLED—Next month's meeting is postponed due to the incarceration of the entire membership on civil contempt charges stemming from their failure to testify before a grand jury.

WOMEN'S ACTION GROUP (WAG) and the Gay and Lesbian Society demanded that Dean Trigger make the Men's Rooms co-ed.

TOOT SNORT HONOR SOCIETY—recently sent a delegation to Kennedy Airport to greet a most distinguished foreign visitor. Due to unforeseen circumstances, the guest speaker's appearance will be delayed for 5-7 years.

The Jestinian proudly announces the first annual Burt Pugach Award. Brooklyn Law students are requested to submit nominations no later than April 1.

Remember The Sleaziest

Jestinian
The Official
Bathroom Tissue of the 1984
Summer Olympics

BLOODY COUP

Continued from page 1

ting with Lutece for a cafeteria contract. Trigger, Have-a-shtick, and Goebells were attending an AALS convention in Aruba, and the entire secretarial staff was in the Reproduction Room doing... whatever you do in a Reproduction Room."

Apparently, Kermit began planning the coup shortly after his dismissal last July. Scouring the slums of Newark, Jersey City, and Upper Saddle River, N.J., Kermit's goal was to recruit the roughest, meanest, street-tough hoodlums he could find to assist in the rebellion. Promising them immediate J.D.'s upon successful completion of the operation, Kermit said he intended to keep his word. He did not elaborate.

Isolated skirmishes were expected to continue today, but Kermit insisted that these incidents would most likely be the result of the usual intraoffice gossip and petty feuding unconnected to the coup.

At a brief press conference, Kermit said that the first and most notable sign of change would be immediate implementation of fire drills. "When was the last time BLS had a fire drill?" he asked rhetorically. "When I was in charge of building security and safety, monthly drills were precision operations choreographed with grace and style. They kept everyone alert, rain or shine, drought or flood, feast or famine. And besides, they were fun. My philosophy is: take care of the little things and the big things will become irrelevant."

Scattered staplegun fire was reported over the weekend as Kermit removed all signs and wallposters smacking of "decadent informationalism" replacing them with signs such as "No bicycle riding in elevators" and "The wearing of caps displaying trademarks or logos of any New York professional athletic teams is strictly prohibited."

Unconfirmed rumors of a counter-revolution have begun to spread. Early indications are that the movement is being led by an uncharacteristic troika consisting of Prof. Romaine, Prof. Richard Falafel, and student Richie Goldstein.

Fearing a takeover by the new Kermit regime, Jestinian has decided to move its operations to an undisclosed nearby location. HINT: It's a certain office that currently houses a certain favorite old desk which once belonged to a certain school newspaper office but was appropriated by a certain professor who has, of late, been the center of a storm of controversy relating to certain grades in a certain con law course and who is reported to have never eaten a Big Mac.

INTERVIEW: THE TROUBLE WITH TRIGGER

In an interview with the Jestinian, Dean Trigger discussed the need for additional space at BLS.

Trigger: Well, I just returned from a fact-finding tour of the University of San Diego Law School, and ... (pause) the trouble with BLS is space. That's right! Space. I need space, the law needs space and my assistant Gerbells needs space.

Jestinian: Could you outline your general plans for the BLS community?

Trigger: Fer sure, just ask, no problem. My prime concern is that the faculty have sufficient space for their legal thinking.

Jestinian: Will this require any reorganization of BLS?

Trigger: Fer sure, but just a little compromise will do it. To insure that we attract the best and the brightest faculty we are going to construct a gourmet/nouveau cuisine kitchen on the eighth floor. We'll import a few of those froggy chefs and build a spiral staircase to the ninth floor Art Deco Faculty Dining Room.

Jestinian: Waiter service no doubt?

Trigger: ... The seventh floor will be the day care center.

Jestinian: For anyone's children?

Trigger: Faculty only. Why do you think we passed the bloody resolution. For students? students?

As I was saying, the sixth floor will be turned into a Faculty recreation/health spa facility. Maybe even a Faculty bowling alley. I love Wild World of Sports.

Jestinian: What about ...

Trigger: ... the fifth and sixth floors will be turned into walnut or oak paneled offices, and I am talking about real wood, not that junk at Nick & Joe's.

Jestinian: What about ...

Trigger: ... yes only the best for BLS.

Jestinian: What ...

Trigger: ... now the fourth floor will be a series of individual Faculty-Client conference rooms, with stenographers, typists, receptionists, messengers, and ... and ...

Jestinian: What about the ...

Trigger: ... the faculty library will be on the first and the second floor, with up-to-date Shepherd's. We don't want the little darlings to join the 4 to 3 club (inside joke—see D. Barrell) ... and the basement will be converted to a free parking lot for the Faculty and their families. It'll be good business for A&S.

Jestinian: What ...

Trigger: Oh, and fer sure the administration can use the third floor for business purposes.

Jestinian: Excuse, BUT, what about the students? (pause)

Trigger: Well, well, what about them?

Gerbells: (whisper) Tell them about the resolution.

Trigger: Well, fer sure, we've formed a committee to discuss the feasibility of keeping students. Until then, stay tuned to station BLS.

BLS GRAD LANDS JOB

By Mike Malice

Just M. Ployd, a member of Brooklyn Law School's 1982 graduating class, announced today that he has found a job in the record time of just under two years. He has already begun work in his new career selling magazines and newspapers at the stand next to the school.

In an exclusive interview with the Jestinian, Mr. Ployd explained the circumstances behind his success as the first member of his class to find work. "I owe it all to the placement office," stated Ployd. "If it hadn't been for their help in loaning me a phone book, I would never have been able to make the 7,000 calls necessary to find work."

Ployd believes that his success will serve as an inspiration to current BLS students who think they might face difficulties in entering the job market. "The nicest thing is that I'll be working right next door so BLS students can see me every day and be encouraged by my good fortune."

Ployd notes that his job gives him an opportunity to meet graduates of all the other area law schools who are employed by the Brooklyn District Attorney and the Corporation Counsel in the Borough Hall building. "Those students who graduated from NYU and Fordham have to sit cooped up in stuffy offices all day. Only we Brooklyn graduates get the advantage of keeping this fresh air," boasted Ployd.

"I couldn't agree more," stated 1980 BLS grad Luck E. Stif. "I'm planning to move my shoeshine stand next to the magazine rack so I can be close to Ployd. Where would we BLS grads be if we didn't stick together?"

BLS placement director, Dr. LaDoom told the Jestinian that she takes full credit for Ployd's new job. "I hope this stops all those complaints that the placement office doesn't do anything for the students." Flushed with pride, LaDoom plans to spend the next year trying to find employment for a 1983 grad so that our most recent graduating class will also be represented in the job market. Although she expressed congratulations to Mr. Ployd, Dr. LaDoom also voiced concern over the impact this may have on the current student body. "I don't want students to become complacent just because someone got a job," stated LaDoom. "Ployd worked hard to get where he is today. After all, he was first in his class and editor of the Bore Review. It's no wonder he achieved what he did." Finally, LaDoom noted with pride that Ployd is the first BLS grad in the last five years to find law related work. "If you notice, when you walk by the newstand, American Lawyer is very prominently displayed," noted LaDoom. "I plan on supporting BLS by purchasing my copy there from now on."

BLS student Maria Seashells gets on-the-job training in new internship program

SBGA V.P. Ditch Rubble at groundbreaking for protective moat ordered by Provost. Published by BrooklynWorks, 2018

S&M Bar Review
 "We'll whip you into shape"
 (Formerly B&D Bar Review)
 Our professionally trained instructors will make you remember.
BLS reps: Muscles Marinara
 Dom N. Atrix

HOLSTER REVIEW
 Continued from page 1
 for the course offered by former Dean Vile.
 "I'm glad this happened," said Holster. "It should put an end to all the talk that I'm to blame for the failures of some people around here. I didn't even teach most of these people. I only marked their exams. How could I have had any influence over their grades?"
Remember The Sleaziest!

LAW SCHOOL TALK

By Cinder Larvae

(must be read with an Andy Rooney nasal twang.)

Have you every noticed the kind of talk that goes on around Brooklyn Law School?! On the elevators, in the cafeteria ... BLSeese is ubiquitous. As an illustration, I have categorized the talk into three grammatical categories, separating 1st from upperclass students.

BLS' BOOK OF FAMOUS QUOTATIONS

First Year Students

When you hear a first year student say, "I didn't open a book over the weekend!", he is really saying: "I studied my ass off over the weekend, but I just want you to think that I didn't so that you won't study either and so that when I contribute a lot in class and get a 93 on the final, you'll think I'm just naturally brilliant!"

Second Year Students

When you hear a second year student say, "I didn't open a book over the weekend!" he's really saying, "I didn't open a book over the weekend."

Third Year Students

Third year students don't bother saying this anymore.

Fourth Year Students

Fourth year students have never said this (so they'd like us to think).

Second Year Students

When you hear a first semester second year student say, "Nah, I didn't go out for Law Review 'cuz I don't want a Wall Street job", he's really saying, "I was too lazy to do all the work and besides I was at the beach."

BLS' LEGAL DICTIONARY

First Semester—First Year Students

Casebook: a book containing records of illustrative legal cases of precedent setting law from which teachers assign cases and students read and brief them.

Second Semester First Year and Second and Third Year Students

Casebook: a paperback study aid that goes by several names such as Gilbert's, Emanuel's, Barbri, etc.

First Year Students

Supplement: a current addition to the casebook from which teachers assign cases and students read and brief them.

Second Year Students-

Supplement: a current addition to a casebook whose purchase is prompted by guilt but whose existence is confined to a locker collecting dust.

Third Year Students

Supplement: a vitamin pill

BLS INTERNATIONAL THESAURUS

Synonyms:

SBA Party: infrequent

<https://brooklyn.law.brooklyn.edu/justinian/vol1984/iss3/1>

REAGAN STATUE COMMITTEE

Dear Friend,

We have the distinguished honor of being on a committee for raising five million dollars for placing a statue of Ronald Reagan in the Hall of Fame in Washington, D.C.

This committee was in a quandary where to place the statue. It was not wise to place it beside the statue of George Washington, who never told a lie, nor beside the statue of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who never told the truth, since Ronald Reagan could never tell the difference.

We finally decided to place it beside Christopher Columbus, the greatest Republican of them all. He left not knowing where he was going, and upon arriving did not know where he was. He returned not knowing where he had been, and did it all on borrowed money.

Over 5,000 years ago, Moses said to the children of Israel, "Pick up your shovels, mount your asses and camels, and I will lead you to the promised land." Nearly 5,000 years later, Roosevelt said, "Lay down your shovels, sit on your asses, light up a Camel, this is the promised land!"

Now, Reagan is stealing your shovels, kicking your asses, raising the price of your camels, and mortgaging the Promised Land. If you are one of the fortunate people who has any money left after paying taxes, we will expect a generous donation as a contribution to this project.

Fraternally,

Reagan Statue Committee

P.S. It is said that President Reagan is considering changing the Republican Party Emblem from an elephant to a condom, because it stands for inflation, protects a bunch of pricks, halts production, and gives a false sense of security while one is being screwed.

REAGAN STATUE COMMITTEE
National Gallery
Washington, D.C.

Rita's
Typeing Servis
& Masage Parlor
*Fast in—Fast out
No Brief Too Big
Best Key Strokes
This Side of the East River
Call 976-3737*

PUBLIC NOTICE

SUPREME COURT STATE OF NEW YORK
COUNTY OF KINGS

JOHN and JANE DOE, being visually and emotionally impaired, present, former and future students of BROOKLYN LAW SCHOOL and those similarly situated

Plaintiff,

-against-

BROOKLYN LAW SCHOOL

Defendant.

NOTICE OF CLASS ACTION

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE:

As the above named DEFENDANT has consistently and intentionally caused the near-sightedness and emotional disturbance of the above named PLAINTIFFS, their heirs, assigns, distributees and buddies through the actions of its agents, to wit: Professors, Maintenance Workers, Clerical Staff, Administrators, Inter alia., specifically, though not limited to:

- A) Failure to provide sufficient lighting by using the pretext of saving energy and thus justifying the use of an unacceptably small number of fluorescent light bulbs,
- B) The consistent and callous assignment of reading irrelevant, nonsensical, printed material too small and too poorly reproduced to serve any purpose other than the destruction of the PLAINTIFF'S sight,
- C) The practice of intimidating first year students by variously requiring them to stand in public and recite things about which they know nothing and thereby holding them up to public scorn and ridicule to the result that said first year students are presently so emotionally screwed-up that PLAINTIFFS have pending before the Court in a related action a MOTION for the appointment of a Guardian Ad Litem pursuant to CPLR 1202 as PLAINTIFFS cannot sufficiently determine what is in their own best interests.

WHEREFORE:

All those who fall within the above Court approved class of PLAINTIFFS must so notify the Clerk of the Court in person, or through their representative, in writing, before adjudged legally incompetent.

Holster's Am. Jr.

HIGHS

ARE Low

By Burt Wiedermyer

In an interview with the Justinian, Glenn Beckert, winner of the AmJur award in Prof. Holster's constitutional law class, admitted that he was pleased to have the chance to win the award again next year. "Yes, it's true that I failed the course and will have to take it again," said Beckert, whose 53 was the highest grade in the class. "But with the unique education I received this year, I have high hopes of winning the AmJur again next year, and maybe even of scoring in the high 50s or low 60s."

Professor Holster, in bestowing the award on his prized pupil, had high praise for the lad. "In Glenn Beckert we have the living embodiment of the American ideal that failure is not necessarily a bar to success," said the professor. "I look forward to having him in my class again next year, and perhaps failing him 6 or 7 more times."

An examination of all the test papers by the Justinian pointed out Beckert's mastery of the subject matter. For instance, he was the only one to exhibit a complete understanding of Essay question number 1: "Describe how the psychological influences inherent in the pre-Victorian upbringing of the framers of the Constitution shaped the formation for the commerce clause." Holster affirmed that Beckert displayed a complete understanding of the question, and therefore was awarded full half-credit for his answer. Similarly, Beckert was the only student to know the answer to short answer question number 267: "Who was the composer of Swanee River?" Finally, Beckert was one of only three students to correctly identify Martha Reeves as the lead singer of the Vandellas.